About the Show

Directed by Leslie Reidel

Music by Charles Gilbert

Adapted by Leslie Reidel, Jennifer Blatchley Smith, and Landis Smith

Based on the book series by Crockett Johnson

“One evening, after thinking it over for some time, Harold decided to go for a walk in the moonlight.” So begins Enchantment Theatre Company’s The Adventures of Harold and the Purple Crayon, based on the seven delightful picture books by Crockett Johnson that follow the zany adventures of an inventive young boy. As it turned out, there wasn’t any moon that night nor was there a path to walk on, so Harold simply drew them. And thus his journey began. Resourceful and brave, Harold creates the world he wants to explore, using nothing more than a big purple crayon and his sky’s-the-limit imagination.

Harold and the Girl in the Enchanted Garden

Enchantment’s innovative production will take your school and family audiences on a wild ride as Harold jets to Mars (Martians, space ships!), joins a circus (he tames a lion!) and meets a princess in an enchanted garden (of course, there’s a dragon, too). The “Harold” books have captivated families for more than fifty years, celebrating the imagination of children and the unique way they see the world. That’s why Enchantment, one of America’s groundbreaking producers of original theater works for children and families, adapted these wonderful stories to a stage production, which premiered in 2009 and toured nationally for two years.

Using all the elements of its well-known signature style (life-size puppets, masked actors, magic, and music), Enchantment has also added a new dimension with the use of large scale video animation. Capturing the books’ simple purple line drawings perfectly, the animation not only creates Harold’s world of make believe but provides an opportunity for the actors to interact with the setting. And of course, being an Enchantment production, the simple purple lines don’t stay simple for long. This popular production will delight and amaze your audiences, from children starting at Harold’s age to grandparents — anyone, in fact, whose heart is young and adventurous.

About the Book Series by Crockett Johnson

Harold draws the moon, flies in a rocket, and journeys through the alphabet

The Adventures of Harold and the Purple Crayon (1955)

“One evening, after thinking it over for some time, Harold decided to go for a walk in the moonlight.” So begins the first of Johnson’s books about Harold and his purple crayon, and then off he goes, using the crayon to draw a moon and a path on which to walk. Leaving the path, he draws himself into a forest, ocean, and balloon, exploring until he’s tired and must find his way to home and bed.

Harold’s Fairytale (1956)

Taking “his purple crayon and the moon along,” Harold goes for a walk in an enchanted garden. But why is nothing growing in the garden? Harold decides to find out, and he draws a castle so that he may go inside to ask the king. Other “fairy tale” scenes follow, including meeting a wish-giving fairy.

Harold’s Trip to the Sky (1957)

On his way to get a drink of water, Harold – accompanied by his purple crayon and the moon, of course – finds himself in a desert. Apart from drinking at an oasis, he thinks, “there isn’t much else to do on a desert.” But “then he remembered how the government has fun on the desert. It shoots off rockets.” So he decides to go to the moon, draws himself a rocket, and he’s off on a science-fiction journey through the sky above.

Harold at the North Pole (1958)

This story tells of Harold’s journey to get a Christmas tree before Santa arrives. On Christmas Eve, “in a warm woolen cap and mittens, with his purple crayon and the moon, he set off” for points north. He finds a snowed-in Santa Claus – fortunately, Harold and his purple crayon are always ready to help.

Harold’s Circus (1959)

“One moonlit evening, mainly to prove to himself that he could do it, Harold went for a walk on a tightrope.” From this opening sentence, Harold and his purple crayon tumble into a circus, where they put on a fine performance under the Big Top.

A Picture for Harold’s Room (1960)

Harold decides that his wall needs a picture, and very soon finds himself in the picture that he’s drawing. Through shifts in perspective, his size changes in relation to the world he’s drawn. Will Harold regain his usual size and find his way home?

Harold’s ABC (1963)

The last of Johnson’s books about Harold finds him on a journey through the alphabet. Harold transforms each letter into something that starts with the letter. Each picture leads seamlessly to the next one – the cut of cake to drinking from a dipper to visiting an enormous edifice – forming the final purple crayon adventure.

About the Author: Crockett Johnson

Crockett Johnson was born, David Johnson Leisk, on October 20, 1906 in New York City. Johnson grew up in Elmhurst, Queens, studying art at Cooper Union in 1924, and at New York University in 1925. Affectionately nicknamed “Crockett” as a child, he arrived at his well-known pseudonym, Crockett Johnson.

In the early stages of his career, Johnson art-edited for several magazines, contributed to others, wrote political cartoons for the New Masses (1934-1940), and drew a weekly comic strip, “The Little Man with the Eyes,” for Collier’s (1940-1943). In 1942, Johnson’s beloved “Barnaby” first appeared in PM and was later syndicated in 52 newspapers across the country. America fell in love with the comic’s child-protagonist, Barnaby Baxter, and his bumbling Fairy Godfather, Mr. O’Malley. Johnson wrote “Barnaby” daily until 1946 when cartoonists Jack Morely and Ted Ferro took over, and on February 2, 1952, Johnson returned to pen the final episode.

Having garnered acclaim as a comic strip writer, Johnson transitioned easily into an author and illustrator of children’s books. Johnson wrote and illustrated over twenty books for children in his lifetime. He illustrated seven others, including The Carrot Seed (1945), written by his wife (whom he married in 1939) and well-known author of children’s literature, Ruth Krauss. His style of illustration is minimal, using simple lines and few colors to clearly tell the story without distraction. Johnson’s best-known works regale the adventures of Harold, a small boy, whose trusty purple crayon leads him on a series of fantastic adventures. Harold was introduced as the protagonist in Harold and the Purple Crayon (1955), a book so popular it inspired a series:

Harold and the Purple Crayon (1955)

Harold’s Fairy Tale (1956)

Harold’s Trip to the Sky (1957)

Harold at the North Pole (1958)

Harold’s Circus (1959)

A Picture for Harold’s Room (1960)

Harold’s ABC (1963)

In 1965, Johnson began exploring the aesthetic values of right triangles and Euclidian geometry yielding about one hundred large, vivid paintings of geometric shapes. His work was abstract, representing Johnson’s own mathematical ideas. He was recognized in 1974 by British Mathematical Journal and contributed original mathematical theorems to Mathematical Gazette in Art, Science and Industry (Bridgeport, Connecticut) in 1970; the IBM Gallery (Yorktown Heights, New York) in 1975; and the Smithsonian’s Museum of History and Technology (Washington, DC) in 1980.

Crockett Johnson died of lung cancer on July 11, 1975 at the age of 68. Ruth Krauss continued writing stories for children and poem-plays for adults until she died on July 10, 1993.

About the HBO Family Series

In 2002, the classic children's book series was adapted into a 13-episode television series for HBO, narrated by actress Sharon Stone and featuring original music by Van Dyke Parks. Geared towards pre-school and early elementary aged children, each episode revolves around a theme or issue pertinent to four-year old Harold: curiosity about nature, independence and exploration, fears, and so on. Like all young children, Harold needs to explore in order to learn and grow. His development comes through trial and error, as he takes risks and overcomes obstacles.

The HBO series received a Day Time Emmy Award for "Main Title Design," as well as an Annie Award Nomination for "Music in an Animated Television Production" and a Humanitas Award Nomination in the "Children's Animation" category.

A Word on Enchantment from Distinguished Colleagues

“Enchantment Theatre is unique in its communicative power. By its use of the art of pantomime, it enables students from all language backgrounds to fully participate in the theatrical experience. In so doing, it breaks down the barriers between students of different heritages and aids in the process of building a vibrant learning community. With many of the productions of Enchantment Theatre being based on storybooks, the use of these prior to the trip in the literacy classes enables students a second pathway into comprehending the text. In so doing, it aids language and literacy education by engaging students in visual and textual experiences that bring stories to life.”

Office of Creative and Performing Arts

Harold, a hungry moose, and a deserving porcupine

“...I was simply overwhelmed by the exquisite performance of The Firebird at the Meyerhoff Symphony Hall last weekend; it was one of the finest programs I have ever seen for children, and for so many reasons perhaps the most salient being its transformative quality and its magical simplicity... it created its enchantment before the children’s very eyes instead of knocking them over with absurdly elaborate tasteless prefabricated imagery; it modeled the way imagination and performance work hand in hand...it was a pure delight, an opening and an inspiration instead of a fait accompli. Dance, mime, gesture: who needs words?”

...Please accept my warmest thanks for all that you are doing...which is truly fabulous (from “fabula,” Latin for story and fable and all that from which enchantment grows...) I felt while listening and watching your performance at the Meyerhoff, not only that you transported us all into the realms of Kaschei’s sorcery but also that the performers themselves came under the spell and were filled with joy while performing...and this too was part of the enchantment... THANK YOU SO MUCH!”

Dr. Ellen Handler Spitz
Honors College Professor of Visual Arts,
University of Maryland
Author of “The Brightening Glance”

“...I have seen Enchantment Theatre’s Cinderella, The Snow Queen, Beauty and the Beast, and Pinocchio where children sit spellbound for an hour—and more. There is the magic of the stage, of characters, who do not themselves speak and who wear neutral masks, of waves of silken blue fabric transmogrifying into an ocean, of people levitating, of theatricality and reality, of laughter and tears.

When I reminisce about Pinocchio, I think how much Landis and Jennifer Smith (Co-Artistic Directors) and Leslie Reidel (Resident Director) understand him as a boy for our times; pulled by his own uncontrolled urges, he is self-centered, a liar, inconstant, and full of “I want, I want.” But throughout Enchantment Theatre’s production, children can discover the joy of connectedness, and that giving is a form of self-expression and not sacrifice, if the heart has love. This could be written as a lesson, but Enchantment Theatre takes us into a world where the lesson is woven in, and children who want the lesson, take it home with them to weave it into their own lives.

...And always, it comes back to “How shall we live?” and “How shall we bring love to others?”

Enchantment Theatre is making magic on the stage that allows real boys and girls and the relatives that brought them to the theatre to lean towards each other and be one with the character’s final embrace. What a gift you are giving us all.”

Dea Adria Mallin
Journalist, Professor of English
Community College of Philadelphia

“Enchantment Theatre encourages children and their families to feel comfortable with their own inner fears, to know that it is ok to have them, and to reach beyond them to the stars and dream. It is theatre, like the love of parents and families and the respect and caring of teachers and community, that illuminates, transforms and heals. When children are free to hope and to dream their imaginations will take them to unbelievable heights. In their adult years they can reach these heights in all of the avenues they pursue in work, in friendship and in love. However, the seeds for these heights must be planted in childhood. The experience of theatre in children’s lives gives them this power to accept, to cope (despite everything), to dream, and to soar.

...If the magic of [Enchantment Theatre] could be taken all over the world, especially where children are terrified and suffering, so much good could be done. Without fantasy children lose hope and cannot dream or imagine... We are so fortunate to have this theatre in our own back yard.”

What the Press and Teachers Have To Say About Enchantment Theatre Company

Enchantment Theatre Company—one of the nation’s most revered organizations for cross-generational theater.

When Enchantment Theatre Company is in town it’s never fairytale theatre as usual.

Los Angeles Times

Sheer Enchantment: how else can one describe the delights conjured up by Enchantment Theatre Company?

Post Standard, Syracuse

When Pinocchio metamorphosed into a real boy, emerging from the magical sweep of the Blue Fairy’s cape, her movements made me weep.

Chestnut Hill Local

“I’m still hungry,” says Pinocchio. Indeed the problem of the empty maw of greed that cannot see the hunger of one’s own father, let alone the hunger of the human community, is one that Enchantment Theatre weaves finely into the tale.

Chestnut Hill Local

Brave little Gerda’s cry for help against The Snow Queen’s demon guards is eloquently answered with heavenly intervention in the form of a gauzy, graceful puppet. It’s a moment of narrative and visual beauty, one of many that illustrate how aptly this company from Philadelphia is named.

Los Angeles Times

It’s not just the superb design work and eye-popping special effects that make Enchantment Theatre’s shows unique. Beautifully choreographed, the company’s movement-based productions effectively mix mime and dance into a stylized ballet of color and sound that entrances both the kids and their adult companions.

Philadelphia Weekly

Even kids who were most restless before the show seemed enraptured as the story unfolded and were awed by moments like the sorceress’ sudden growth on stage and a statue of Pan abruptly coming to life.

The Sorcerer’s Apprentice, performed by the Enchantment Theatre, brought tremendous enjoyment, enrichment, and wonder to the participants! My favorite comment from a student was ‘Where can I find that book so I can read that story again?’! I strongly recommend such productions for city children since it exposes them to the worlds beyond their perception of reality!

Sylvester AND THE MAGIC PEBBLE

As usual Enchantment Theatre presented a fantastic children's theatre production. Teachers and students alike were mesmerized by the artistry of Sylvester and the Magic Pebble. Thank you for continuing to produce literary-based work that is accessible and magical!

Jaymi Gilmour-Crowley, Cam-Plex, Gillette, WY

Sylvester and the Magic Pebble, held in the main theater at the Sangre de Cristo Arts Center on February 4, 2012, was a gem. The gentle but never dull production was true to the award-winning book and its timeless message. How delightful to hear in our busy, phone crazy world that all we really need is to cherish our real relationships. Enchantment Theatre's production value was high, with costumes for the donkeys detailed right down to their "hoofed" shoes. The squirrel costumes were appropriately "nutty" and included feather boa frisky tails. The actors were adept at mime and told William Steig's tale without benefit of facial expression, as they wore mysterious masks. The lion mask was especially nice. Jaunty dances and precise movements carried the plot well and kept the attention of the audience, both young and young at heart. An added magical surprise was the animated set piece that brought the book's illustrations to life on rear screen projections. This enhanced the quick scene changes by timing the appropriate music to the narration. All in all, it was an enjoyable afternoon of family fun and well worth the price of admission.

Donna Stinchcomb, Curator, Buell Children's Museum, Pueblo, CO

Sylvester and the Magic Pebble was the hit of our student matinee season! We have received an overwhelming number of great comments from the students and teachers that attended the two sold out shows. Enchantment Theatre Company always delivers wonderful productions and this was no exception. Not only was the performance a hit but the performers and tour staff were enjoyable and pleasant. Everyone had a great time, and this is what every live performance should be about.

William R. Wood, Alberta Bair Theater, Billings, MT

It was a wonderful day filled with over 2000 enthusiastic students and teachers between the two school performances, and the evening public show was a huge hit! Many thanks, and we think your company and work are absolutely wonderful!

Cathy von Storch, Paramount Theater, Charlottesville, VA

The premiere performance of Enchantment Theatre's Sylvester and the Magic Pebble at Allentown Symphony Hall this past Saturday was a pure delight from start to finish for young and old alike. The classic story by William Steig was brought to life by a very talented and enthusiastic group of young actors through the use of simple props and scenery, entertaining dancing and acrobatic movement. After the performance, the cast graciously greeted audience members who sought them out for autographs and handshakes. As patrons exited the theater, many positive comments were shared and overheard – the adults appreciated the opportunity to participate in an affordable, live theater experience with the children in their lives and be able to share a beloved story from their own youth in the process. Sylvester and the Magic Pebble proved to be another successful collaboration between Allentown Symphony Hall and Enchantment Theatre Company. Hopefully, through this partnership, the opportunities to offer similar family friendly programming will continue in upcoming seasons.

I don't really remember the last time we presented a children's event where the kids were quite this captivated.

*Rodney Rock, Director
Jorgensen Center for the Performing Arts, University of Connecticut*

It is not often that I hear peels of laughter and shouting from the audience in response to actors on our main stage. I could tell that both teachers and children alike were enthralled by the performance...Harold brought out the imagination in everyone, including me.

*Michael Bodolosky, Executive Director
Pasquerilla Performing Arts Center, Johnstown, PA*

I so appreciate how Enchantment Theatre did not underestimate how much children comprehend; the humor, the magic, and the relationships. The production value, the performances, all aspects were wonderful.

*Vicky Pittman, Education and Special Projects Manager
The Colonial Theatre, Keene, NH*

The energy in the audience during the show was palpable; I can't remember when I've seen little kids so completely engaged in a performance.

*Lian Farrer, Vice President for Education
State Theatre, New Brunswick, NJ*

Enchantment Theatre Company's The Adventures of Harold and the Purple Crayon is pure MAGIC! The brilliant use of projections and seamless transitions from 'markings' of the crayon to the elaborate (and very copious) props transforms what could easily have been a theatrical nightmare a truly remarkable theatrical experience. The Brooklyn Center audience was astounded, as evidenced by the cheers during the final curtain call. Enchantment delivered yet another home run for our family and school audiences!

Presenter Feedback: Tour 2007-2008

Every aspect of your productions is always top drawer from the lighting and the sets to the masks and quality of the actors. It is so rewarding to present your productions in our community because I know unquestionably that they are going to be of the highest caliber.

I saw THE VELVETEEN RABBIT four times and I know I still missed many details. This is a beautiful show, BRAVO!!

*Carolyn Deuel
ARTCORE, Inc., Casper, WY*

The Velveteen Rabbit is one of the most complete and satisfying shows we have presented here for both youth and families, and it is truly memorable. Enchantment is making a true and lasting impact in the hearts of young people as well as their parents and teachers.

*Lucas Smiraldo, Associate Director for Education and Outreach
Broadway Center for the Performing Arts, Tacoma, WA*

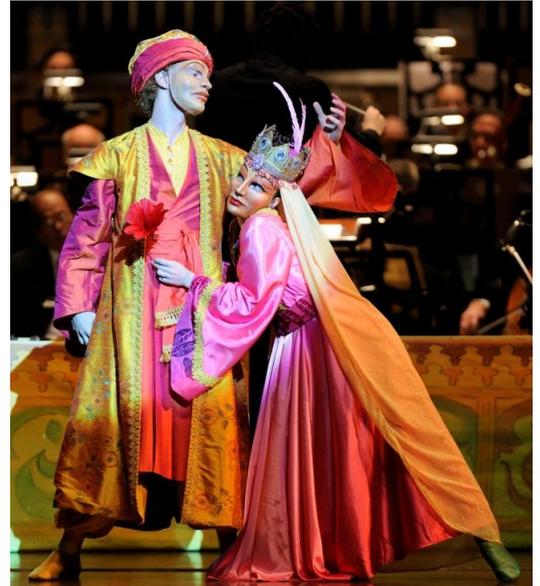

The Velveteen Rabbit was one of the most beautiful pieces of theatre I've ever seen or presented. I was mesmerized! I not only highly recommend this show, but recommend Enchantment Theatre Company as well.
